The place wherein we meet is finished outside, all but the steeple which we will get up as soon as we are able ; the inside is p'ew'd well, altho' not beautiful ; we have also got an altar, where we have had the communion administered twice to our great joy and satisfaction, chusing rather to partake of that Holy Sacrament without these necessary conveniences that the table in England furnished with well knowing that they add not to the worthiness of the guests rather than be without it, not but we are sensible they add much to the decency The Gardner (Der Gärtner) - Score and Parts order of it. Every member of the family had his particular horse and servant, and rarely rode unattended by his servant, to open gates and to take charge of the horses ; carriages were unknown. The markers at the graves were either broken, had fallen or were about to fall.
