Just as the government economist does not bother to know exactly how many acres are seeded by fanner John Doe or how many pigs he has, a physicist does not care about the position or velocity of a particular molecule of a gas which is formed by a very large number of individual molecules. Pauli wrote back that he was in the train at that time and the train had a brief halt at the station in the city where the experiment was being conducted, suggesting the failure of experiment due to his presence in the city station at that time. Heisenberg, Dirac, and other scientific giants--the author's friends, teachers and colleagues.
