They were reunited in Canada only when the war brides and children were released a year later. He set up home with that other woman in Bathurst, where he practiced as a veterinarian until he died.

He also, especially when retired, wrote poems in letters to colleagues and friends. Hatt, Blaine E. Melinda Neeley. Unidentified and Fragments [subseries]:.

Sandra M. It was under these conditions that Cogswell emerged as a committed nationalist. These initiatives were not solely the appetite for cultural nationalism but also the same worry that had attended Confederation: that with the rise of America as a world super power, Canada, a sparsely populated nation perched precariously on its border, should assert its own sovereignty, if only that sovereignty could be.
